Introduction:

Contract 902 forms part of MTRC's South Island Line (East) which is a medium-capacity railway connecting the Southern District of Hong Kong to the existing Admiralty Station. Contract 902 includes the design and construction of Nam Fung Tunnel and two ventilation buildings. The drill-and-blast tunnel is approximately 3.2km long extending from Admiralty Station at the north to the Nam Fung Ventilation Building at the south. The Hong Kong Park Ventilation Shaft is an 80m deep, 30m diameter elliptical shaped shaft under construction in a densely populated urban environment on the north side of Hong Kong Island including pipe piling ELS works and shaft excavation by blasting. Works near Nam Fung Portal at the southern end, include the Nam Fung Ventilation Building pipe pile ELS together with an enclosed railway transition box structure including site formation works, bored piling works, and shaft ELS construction works.

During the site visit, participants will be able to visit the Nam Fung site which currently involves excavation of corestones within the saprolite, and possibly the Nam Fung Tunnel as well, depending on the cycle activities on the day of the visit.
